A: Your problem is in the data you are using. The code you copied comes from "FreeProgram.Info", which is a website known as 'spyware' and most likely contains malicious software. Deleting the file will not remove the malware, simply because it wasn't executed. Because of this, your solution should be to either: Go to the website you used and ensure you downloaded it from a trusted site (e.g. from a friend's computer that is not infected), or Install an Antivirus program to check the source and remove the malware. Recently, Pay Per Click (PPC) advertisers have embraced smart bidding and adjusted their bids based on historical trends (e.g., clicks, impressions, and conversions). The upshot of this is that the quality of the users that are likely to click on PPC ads is increasing. That being said, many users still experience frustration with this type of ad since it does not cater to a user's general interests and consumption habits. A user may not find it feasible or relevant to create custom landing pages for every interest. On the other hand, switching ad networks is somewhat
