October 9, 2018 | 8:30 AM - 12:00 PM | DoubleTree By Hilton, St. Cloud, Minnesota, United States The purpose of this conference is to expand the understanding of how and why the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) works, and how it can be used to improve the citizen engagement and turnout in elections. A robust understanding of NVRA is necessary to advance the public participation agenda of the National Conference of State Legislatures. The conference will address the ways in which individuals register to vote, the types of barriers that hinder voter registration and registration maintenance, strategies to overcome these obstacles, and the need to ensure that people who wish to register can do so in the state in which they live. Innovative solutions to address these problems will be showcased during the day in panel discussions. Speakers will include a range of stakeholders representing academic and non-academic institutions, industry, and government. Teaching a youngster about the complexities of computers and the applications of programming - specifically cybersecurity - can be a daunting task. But with a dash of creativity and some patience, the explanation can be straightforward and productive. In the year 2016, computer-related accidents have been an everyday occurrence in the context of business and personal pursuits. For example, a lack of basic cyber hygiene resulted in a 75% drop in the security of e-commerce. This led to a loss of more than 4 billion US$ just a few days into the new year alone. With this in mind, teaching kids about the risks and benefits of using technology and cybersecurity, will make them aware of the dangers at an early age, and in turn, give them the tools to protect their gadgets and online accounts. In this course, participants will learn the following skills: - The origins of the internet - The different types of
